

Hello neighbours, you hard working men and women of Toronto-Danforth. Before casting your vote, ask yourself:

What has my MP done for me lately?	<input type="radio"/>
Am I or my family, better off than three years ago?	<input type="radio"/>
Is my neighbourhood safer, cleaner, or more prosperous than four years ago?	<input type="radio"/>
Have I ever been contacted by my MP between the elections?	<input type="radio"/>
What am I hoping to accomplish by sending the same people back to the House of Commons?	<input type="radio"/>

If you feel that you can't find any reasonable answer, this time around you have a choice to send a concerned citizen who is not a politician.

Bahman Yazdanfar

Bahman doesn't answer to party leaders, non-delegated industrialists, union bosses, or special groups. He only answers to his electorate. Besides, he can't possibly do more damage than what has already been done, CAN HE?

Please do not fall for the empty promises that are given to you by mainstream party members on issues that fall under Provincial and Municipal jurisdiction. The Federal Government's main responsibilities are:

|----------------------|----------------|
| Money & Banking | Defence |
| Employment Insurance | Citizenship |
| External Relations | Criminal law |
| Trade Regulation | Transportation |
| Postal Service | Copyrights |
| Aboriginal Peoples | Census |

Dear Non-Voter

I do sympathize with you when you don't want to bother to vote. I understand that you are among those in the majority who choose not to vote for one or more of the following reasons:

You believe that voting is a waste of your valuable time.

You feel that you don't want to be responsible for the MP's wrongdoings.

You don't see any useful outcome as a result of your participation.

You dislike or even in some cases hate the way politicians behave and feel they treat you unfairly.

You have no hope for a better future either for yourself or your children.

You see the election process as a total waste of tax-payers' money.

You pride yourself on your decisions and decide not to waste your vote.

You are sick and tired of unfounded promises that are given to you at election time. For all the above reasons this is the time to exercise your right and get inspired.

Raising the bar on democracy.

Voters often latch onto a political party for a single issue, and a political party often excludes anyone else's interests by going hell-bent on some issue. Special status gets assigned to all groups, races, religions, ages, and is based on anything but need; and need is universal. We ought to make sure "everyone" is included. Then we'll be truly equal, colour blind and compassionate and there won't be a need for special status or points.

There is another alternative: elect an Independent Candidate, one who is part of the suffering population and is neither a politician nor a member of the aristocratic oligarchy. And let the rest of the nation know that the people of Toronto-Danforth will no longer accept, nor put-up with the status-quo.

What, do you ask, can an Independent M.P. do?

Income Guarantee:

An independent M.P. can introduce a bill for a Minimum Income Guarantee to eliminate useless and costly bureaucracy, elevating individual dignity and promoting creativity, providing a basic income for those who are in need of welfare, employment insurance, affordable housing, disability benefits, etc. This bill would reduce the costs of administering the aforementioned services, and would free up human resources, which could apply themselves to a more productive way of life that benefits the health of society and its prosperity.

Monetary Reform:

An independent M.P. can introduce a bill to reform the process of borrowing money from private banks by government and utilizing the Bank of Canada instead, to eliminate the annual deficit. Canadians are paying over $85-million per day in interest on federal debt alone, which affects needed public services such as health care, affordable housing and needed support services, to name a few. And as a result we will only impoverish ourselves and our children, our grandchildren and their children's children, if we don't take action at this time.

Creation of Electoral Subdistrict Overseers and Investigators:

An independent M.P. can introduce a bill to make public inquiries easy and ongoing between elections. In each electoral district there could be volunteers who are unaffiliated with any party, who are much closer and more accessible to voters, and who would be sufficiently empowered to oversee, investigate, and to hold the MP's accountable for their actions or lack thereof. They would be largely outside the control of the established mainstream political parties.

Social Cohesion:

An independent M.P. can introduce a bill to promote community activities, facilitate access to basic necessities to elevate social interaction reducing policing by supervising and educating youths.

Fair Election:

An independent M.P. can introduce a bill to remove party names from the ballots to create a fair playing field for candidates to connect with their constituents. An independent can also propose removing taxpayer subsidies for parties to buy excessive advertising of party - funding to avoid unfair influences of excessive advertising budgets, supplied by the parties under one brand such as Liberals, NDP, Conservatives, etc., so voters can vote based on the merit of their candidates, and not based on the name of the party.

Right to Recall:

An independent M.P. can introduce a bill to empower constituents to call for bi-elections within the first 12 or 24 months if their elected MPs do not deliver what they promised or act differently than they were campaigning in office. Of course the majority of the electorate must sign petitions, with a majority being equal to the total number of votes earned by an MP plus one, with voting taking the form of online and/or hard copy.

Rewards for Voting:

An independent M.P. can introduce a bill to give a minimum of $5 in the form of a redeemable coupon to be accepted by businesses for everyone who casts his or her ballot on the election day to increase voter turnout and promote participation of citizens in an electoral process.

Your Votes Count

Canada's voting population	24.25 Million
2011 voter turnout	14.72 Million
Elected MPs' votes
Conservative	4.38 Million
N.D.P.	2.37 Million
Liberal	0.57 Million
B.Q.	0.06 Million
Green.	0.03 Million

The above numbers show that elected conservatives who form the majority government are mandated by 18% of eligible voters. And if all MP's agree on any given bill (100%), it is just representative of 30% of eligible voters in Canada.

Negotiation:

An independent M.P. has leverage to assure budgets reflect his or her constituency, reduce poverty, and increase electorate voters' quality of life, without being subject to a party's policies.

This is the time for you to fire useless MPs. Select, Elect and Hire a new M.P. Someone who reads a document before voting on it.
